ABOUT ANDALUZ

The historic La Posada de Albuquerque Hotel reopened October 1, 2009 as Hotel Andaluz, following a $30 million renovation. The hotel boasts 107 rooms and suites with meeting space for a variety of corporate booking needs. The hotel's décor incorporates Moroccan and Spanish colonial influences reflective of the original design of the lobby, and features a mezzanine-level cultural center honoring New Mexico's museums, cultural institutions, performing arts groups, and other culturally significant organizations.

The renovation has preserved the historic nature of the building while modernizing the technology and introducing environmental sustainability. The property will achieve Gold LEED certification- a unique distinction for a property on the National Register of Historic Places. Andaluz, located one block from the Albuquerque Convention Center, is sure to become the anchor property of a vibrant and revitalized downtown Albuquerque.

ANDALUZ: WHAT'S IN A NAME

Andaluz is short form of Andalucia, the Spanish region which inspired the interior style and architecture of the hotel. The logo mark is an adaptation of a classic Andalucian tile design, and the logo graphic represents four interlocking A's. The spices, textiles and metal crafts of Andalusia and Morocco inspired the rich color palette. The classic font balances the exotic style of the logo mark with simple elegance. The logo will sometimes be incorporated within a classic Andalucian arch, a prevalent architectural element in southern Spain found throughout the hotel's public spaces.
